Stephen Wood is chief market strategist, North America for Russell Investments. Based in New York, Dr. Wood conducts research on, and acts as one of Russell's external voices for the economy, capital markets, portfolio strategies, and investor behavior. Dr. Wood works closely with Russell's institutional clients and retail partners to communicate Russell's global market perspectives, investment process and portfolio management. He joined Russell in 2005.

Dr. Wood is a frequent contributor to the international media. He appears on CNBC, BBC, Fox Business Network, Bloomberg TV, and PBS and is often quoted in publications such as the Wall Street Journal, the Financial Times, the International Herald Tribune, as well as other major international newspapers.

Prior to joining Russell, Steve worked with institutional investment clients at Manning & Napier Advisors in Rochester, New York, as senior portfolio strategist. He gained significant experience with high net worth clients as vice president with Fisher Investments' private client group in San Francisco. Previous to that, Steve was a senior equity portfolio strategist at Alliance-Bernstein in New York City. Representing the firm globally, he was a much sought after spokesperson for both retail clients and financial professionals and was Alliance's voice on the economy, capital markets, securities research and portfolio management. Steve began his private sector career as a senior research associate & economist for the Milken Institute at the Milken Family Foundations.

Before entering the financial services industry, Steve had extensive academic experience as a professor in California in the 1990s. Steve's doctoral and academic work focused on the impact of institutional structures on decision making and how they influence behavioral outcomes.
